

ABOUT THE STATE

Happenings of Interest from Different Sections.

The cornerstone of the Orleans County Memorial hospital in Newport will be laid Sunday, July 30.

John and Calvin Coolidge, jr., sons of Vice-President Coolidge, are with their grandfather, Col. John Coolidge, in Plymouth for the remainder of the summer.

A 12-hour census taken on Main street in Enosburg Falls last Sunday of automobile traffic resulted as follows: Vermont automobiles, 576; out-of-state cars 70; teams, 77, a total of 723.

When Charles P. Hunt went to his barn in North Troy a few days ago, four Chinamen suddenly jumped up and ran for the woods, escaping. It is supposed they were lying in wait, expecting to meet an automobile at night and be carried somewhere southward.

The state fish hatchery at Roxbury is in need of a new sturgeon, for the six footer presented by Warden Edson Isham, who caught him in Lake Champlain, has lost his tail, owing to bruises. P. A. Dickinson, superintendent of the hatchery, evidently appreciates having a sturgeon around, as he has written the state fish and game commissioner to have Warden Isham catch him another.

The home property of the late Dr. Frederick S. Pratt of Bennington, was purchased Thursday by Alfred H. Winslow, founder of the Winslow Home for Aged, Inc., who, as soon as a meeting of the incorporators can be called will transfer the property to the corporation. The purchase means that a new building will not be necessary and that the institution may be in operation not later than next March. The consideration was $30,000.

At a meeting of the school directors of the North Caledonia district, held last Saturday, Eugene Currie was elected superintendent for the ensuing year, subject to confirmation by the state board. He was formerly grammar school principal in Arlington, but for the past few years has been doing school work in Connecticut. He will assume office Aug. 1 in case of confirmation. The meeting was held at West Burke.

MUSTER AUG. 5-19.

Vermont Troops to Assemble at Fort Ethan Allen.

Rutland, July 22.—The first annual encampment of the 172d Infantry, 1st Vt., to be held in this state, since the war will be mustered at Fort Ethan Allen from August 5 to August 19, inclusive. For the last three years, the regiment has held its annual encampment at Camp Devens, Mass.

This regiment, of the Vermont National Guard now conforms to the new table of organization and contains nine infantry companies, three machine gun companies, four headquarters companies, a service company, howitzer company and medical detachment. These nineteen organizations are distributed all over the state in Rutland, Burlington, Brattleboro, Montpelier, Barre, Newport, Northfield, Bellows Falls, Windsor, Bennington, St. Albans, St. Johnsbury, Lyndonville and Ludlow.

The personnel of the machine gun companies is made up largely of men who had actual service in the machine gun service in the machine gun outfit during the recent war. The various headquarters companies contain experts and specialists who had actual service in their respective classes during the war and are now prepared to function on very short notice.

The howitzer company in Bennington is armed with 37 gun (one pounder) and Stokes mortars. The regiment will have the use of all of the animals at Fort Ethan Allen and will probably draw in the neighborhood of 70 mules and 30 horses. This will give the regiment an opportunity to conduct ceremonies and parades in the proper manner.

The Bennington centennial trophy and $100 in cash is available for trophies and prizes in rifle competition. August 10, Bennington day, which is a state holiday, will be Governor's day in camp and the people of the state are invited to attend and see their own regiment in training.

Col. E. W. Gibson of Brattleboro who is in command of the regiment, states that the general policy of the government is to depend largely upon the citizen soldier to furnish reasonable protection in case of emergency and the success of this policy depends upon the support given by the individual citizens of the state. Therefore, the colonel adds, a general invitation is extended to all citizens of Vermont to visit the camp at Fort Ethan Allen this summer.

NO GLANDERS INDEMNITY.

For the First Time in 27 Years in Vermont.

For the first time since 1895, a fiscal year has passed in the state department of agriculture without the payment of any indemnity for horses condemned and killed because of infection with glanders. Since 1917 rigid regulations have been in force requiring what is known as the mink test of horses coming from cities and sections known to be heavily infected with glanders. On horses coming from territory known to be from the disease, only a physical examination has been required. The result has been that Vermont has ceased to be a good dumping ground for those unscrupulous dealers could unload glandered horses.

Envious.

Father O'Brien had preached on "Married Life and Its Duties," and an Irish woman said to her friend, "I'm sure, it's a fine sermon His Reverence gave us this mornin'."

"It was, indeed," the other woman replied, "an' it's me that's wishin' I knew as little about the matter as he does."—Boston Transcript.

An Inexpensive Trip.

"Name says she is going to travel hundreds of miles on her honeymoon." "I shouldn't wonder; her fiancé runs a merry-go-round at the beach."—Boston Transcript.

CORN CROP BACKWARD.

Too Much Rain Has Affected Small Grains

The agricultural statisticians of the United States department of agriculture co-operating with the New England state departments of agriculture have issued the following weekly crop notes summary:

"Rain has continued quite generally over southern New England during the week with some fair and hot days changing rapidly into cool and inclement weather. Farm work has been delayed considerably. Northern regions have had better weather, the wet fields have dried out considerably and farm operations have made some progress. The corn crop is generally backward and in many fields looks stunted and pale in color. As a rule the ground has been too wet and the weather too cool for this crop. It now needs sunshine and hot weather.

Small grains have suffered from too much rain in most localities. Numerous reports of rust and smut in the oats have been received. Considerable lodging of oats and barley, due to heavy rains and high winds, is reported.

Having started generally, but has been greatly delayed by rains. The stand is poor in some areas in Vermont but in most sections yields are large. Quality is generally due to excessive moisture and lack of sunshine while curing. Fair weather is needed at once for the proper making of the crop.

In Arostook county early potatoes are looking well but late planted are showing rot due probably to wet ground and cool weather. In other areas although both stand and promise is quite uneven the crop prospect is generally good.

Tobacco in the Connecticut valley is backward and has suffered from too much rain. It is also considerably affected by wildfire. On dry lands the plants are now showing a good growth. Fruit prospects have changed but little during the week and a continuance of a heavy drop of apples and pears is reported in many districts.

Gardens have suffered from frequent rains, but have improved somewhat during the week as many weeds and smothered plots have been put in shape. In the Connecticut valley the onions grown from sets are almost ready to harvest. The yield has been out by too much moisture. Seed onions are very uneven and the outlook is not promising though with dry hot weather the crop would probably make considerable improvement.

In Vermont a considerable area in beans has been drowned out and will probably be abandoned and sown to buckwheat.

Cranberries have steadily improved of late and in spite of damage by worms and early frost a promise a larger production than last year.

No Chance For Him.

Charles M. Schwab said in an after-dinner speech in Pittsburgh:

"The Connecticut Yankee in the business world still holds his own. He may never become a Carnegie or a Rockefeller, but he never becomes a bankrupt, either; a modest million or so counts him."

"A Hartford man one day entered a hotel in Hongkong, the Astor house, and found that the clerk was an American—in fact, a Connecticut Yankee."

"How long have you been working here?" said the Hartford man.

"Ten years," said the clerk.

"What?" said the Hartford man.

"You are a Connecticut Yankee," worked here 10 years and don't own the place?"

"Ah, but you see," the clerk explained, "the boss is a Connecticut Yankee, too."—Pittsburgh Post.

On the Road of Good Intentions

Fence Charged with Electricity Causes Death.

A large limb of a weeping willow in falling across a highway broke a transmission wire of an electric railroad, causing it to come in contact with a wire fence, which immediately became charged with electricity. The crash of the falling limb attracted a number of persons in the neighborhood, who went to see what had happened. Among these people was a mother and her little boy. The latter was but five years old, and at the time was barefooted. In order to avoid stepping on some broken stone in the road, he walked on a path between the fence and the road, where he came in contact with the fence and was instantly killed. The father of the boy brought an action against the railway company on the ground that the boy's death was caused by its negligence, and he recovered a judgment.

The court of appeals of Maryland affirmed the judgment in Hagerstown & F. Ry. Co. v. State, 115 Atlantic Reporter, 783. Judge Thomas, in discussing the obligation of electric companies to use proper care in maintaining their plants, said:

"If electric companies are negligent in permitting broken wires to remain in contact with their high-tension wires, and are liable for injuries resulting from such negligence, as in Nelson's case, supra (82 Md. 293, 33 Atl. 763, 31 L. R. 572, 51 Am. St. Rep. 464), there is greater reason why they should be held liable for injuries resulting from maintaining their lines so close to a decayed tree as to endanger those in the lawful use of a highway. The appellant's line was on its private way, where the appellants had a right to construct and maintain it. But it was also along a public highway, where the public and the little child that was killed had a right to be, and the company was therefore ## required, in maintaining its line, to exercise that high degree of care commensurate with the danger to which it exposed those using the highway.

If the proximity of its line to the decayed tree rendered the highway unsafe for the use of the public, it was the duty of the appellant either to have the limb removed or to exercise proper care to protect its wires and if the injury complained of was the result of its failure to discharge that duty, it should be held liable."
